[NOTE BY THE PUBLISHER.—Although somewhat delayed in the work, by circumstances uncontrollable, the publisher presents to the public a Directory of the City of Cumberland which he trusts will fully meet the demand. No trouble, labor or expense has been spared to make the Directory both thorough and complete.]

The City of Cumberland.

The City of Cumberland, next to Baltimore the largest and most important town in Maryland, is situated at the junction of the north branch of the Potomac river and Wills creek, and is surrounded by spurs of the Alleghany range, making up mountain scenery surpassed in beauty and grandeur by few localities in the United States.

Cumberland and vicinity was settled in early colonial times. In 1754 George Washington, then a colonial colonel, occupied the spur of Knobley mountain on which now stands the court-house, as a fort and trading post, and called it Wills Creek. A year later General Braddock named the post Fort Cumberland, in honor of the Duke of Cumberland, and perhaps, as some think, because the scenery resembled that of Cumberland in England. The town was incorporated in 1805, and laid out in streets and alleys, though, as was usual in those times, with but little thought for the future, the surveyors apparently not dreaming that it would grow to its present proportions.

The population of Cumberland in 1870 was 8,215, and in 1873, by the city census, 11,299. Since 1873 no census has been taken, but the population is estimated, from the city registration lists, and statistics of various kinds, to be about 13,000, which figure is generally regarded as correct. The rapid growth from 1870 to 1873 was caused by the completion of the Pittsburg and Connellsville railroad and the establishment of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company's iron-works, which occurred at that period. Our growth since 1873 has not been as rapid, therefore, as from 1870 to 1873.

The City of Cumberland is the seat of government of Allegany county, and the main depot of supplies for a number of smaller towns within a circuit of fifty miles, as it is the principal town in the great Cumberland coal region. It is an important station on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad; the terminus of the Cumberland and Piedmont (mining region) railroad; the Bedford Division of the Pennsylvania railroad, and the Pittsburgh Division of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, and is the head of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, over which much of the coal mined in the Cumberland region is shipped to tidewater.

The advantages offered by Cumberland as a location for manufactories are manifold and important. First is that great desideratum, cheap fuel. Cumberland coal, the best steam-generator in the world, is sold in the city at $1.75 to $2 per ton, according to quality, and the water furnished by the city works, from the Potomac river, does not foam nor form scale in boilers. Hence steam is economically and advantageously made. Building material, stone, brick, fire-brick and fire-clay, lime, cement and timber abound in the best qualities and at prices comparing favorably with those of other localities. Iron manufacturers will find in the vicinity not only cheap fuel, etc., but abundant deposits of iron ores. The manufacturer of steel goods, and especially tools, has the advantage of obtaining here the best qualities of bar-steel from first hands. Glass-sand exists in great quantities, as well as fine clay for potteries. To all branches of manufacture are offered the inducement of extensive shipping facilities by rail and canal; and locations for manufactories contiguous to either railroad or canal, or both, are obtainable.

The city is lighted by gas, furnished by a private company, and supplied with water by the Holly system of water-supply and fire-protection, the works belonging to and operated by the city. The new city hall, a fine engraving of which is given on another page, located in the square bounded by Centre, Bedford, Liberty and Frederick streets, is the finest building of the kind in the State outside of Baltimore city. In it is the Academy of Music, the equal in all its appointments of any theatre of its size in the country. The Academy is now leased and managed by Mr. J. T. Ford, of Baltimore.

There are in the city eighteen churches, a list of which is given elsewhere. There are three banks, two national and one savings institution. Two daily and two weekly newspapers are published. Hotel accommodations are furnished by four first-class hotels, several small hotels and a number of eating-houses.

Educational facilities are provided by the State school system, which supplies four school-houses; Allegany county academy, (endowed); the Capuchin monastery; St. Edward's Academy and Alpine Hall, (for young ladies and children); and a number of excellent private schools.

The industries of the city are extensive and varied, including the steel-rail and bar-mills and machine-shops of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company; the mills of the Cumberland cast-steel manufacturing company; a cotton factory; iron and brass founderies and machine-shops; cement mills; tanneries; flour mills; furniture works, (among them the largest factory of the kind in the State); extensive planing-mills and sash and door factories, in one and all of which steam is used as motive power.

Direct communication by rail, in many cases without change of cars, is had from Cumberland with all the principal cities. The following is a table of distances:
